BIG ANNOUNCEMENTS: ARK HOUSE SOLD, NEW MEETING LOCATION, NEW OFFICE LOCATION!

A lot has taken place since the last newsletter went out. Most of it is tied to the fact that an offer was placed on the ARK house in July. (You may already know that with all the final 'garage sale' notices that were put out about that time to try and empty the last of the items still in the house.) It took a lot of work getting the last of the items sold, given away, or trashed (including one old and very heavy safe). It took a lot of other work, especially by our realtor to bring us to closing, which finally occurred on September 13. We owe a lot of thanks to Bob Caperna of HER Realtors who went over and above the normal amount of work to get this sale accomplished. Bob is also on the advisory board for Good Shepherd Ministries, who by the way, mowed our lawn for us for free until the house closed. Lord bless Bob and Good Shepherd Ministries.

Even though closing was not until September, we needed a new place for our monthly meetings starting in August, since the ARK house was already cleaned out. For two months we met at the new Wilmington-Stroop branch of the Dayton Metro Library. This was workable, but the room was rather small, and the library closes at 8:30. So I am very grateful to Karen Savage who answered the call in an email announcement for a church who might be willing to host us. So, starting in October, our monthly meetings will be held at Faith Christian Fellowship in Beavercreek (see more information on the back page of this newsletter). Thanks also to their pastor, Rande Greene for welcoming us to meet there.

Finally, we still need some office space to store supplies, produce newsletters, etc. The Lord has supplied a nice little office for very low monthly expense that fits our current needs. It is located just ½ mile north of the US 35 exit. Our new mailing address is now:

The Ark Foundation of Dayton, Inc.
1255 N Fairfield Rd. Box #3
Beavercreek, OH 45432

You may wonder what will ARKY do with the proceeds from the house sale. It had been decided well in advance that the vast majority of the proceeds will go to other Creation ministries. We will be sending donations to Answers in Genesis, The Institute for Creation Research, and Bruce Malone's ministry (<http://www.searchforthetruth.net/>). With my vision to start speaking at churches and other venues, a portion of the remainder will be used to purchase books and other

The Wonder of It All: Morning Has Broken

By Mark Jurkovich

One recent Sunday, our organist chose to play the hymn "Morning Has Broken" for the Invocation. I decided to follow along, so found it in the hymnal and read the lyrics as he played. The words came alive for me that day. I never paid close enough attention to them before. I can imagine the author waking up one morning, thanking God for a beautiful sunrise, and trying to imagine what it must have been like that first morning; on the day the Lord rested from all His work of creation week (Gen. 2:2).

The experience of a glorious morning can hearken us back to that first morning, when everything was still "very good". Read the lyrics below and try to imagine yourself on that first morning, and let it fill you with worship of the one who gave us this wonderful creation; and even gave us dominion over His amazing world.

Morning has broken like the first morning
Blackbird has spoken like the first bird
Praise for the singing
Praise for the morning
Praise for them springing fresh from the Word (some versions have "world")

Imagine that first morning for Adam and Eve, before they fell into sin. There must have been a symphony of praise from the animals to wake them up! I have always enjoyed hearing the songbirds through an open window in the morning. Just a tiny taste of what it must have been like that first morning.

Sweet the rain's new fall, sunlit from heaven
Like the first dewfall on the first grass
Praise for the sweetness of the wet garden
Sprung in completeness where his feet pass

"But a mist went up from the earth and watered the whole face of the ground" Gen 2:6. We do not know if this is how the earth was watered all the way up to the flood. But however the earth was watered before the fall, it was surely gentle and not destructive. Enjoying a gentle rain today, or seeing drops glistening on the grass is just another taste of the beauty that must have been on that first day.

Mine is the sunlight
Mine is the morning
Born of the one light Eden saw play
Praise with elation, praise ev'ry morning
God's recreation of the new day

How often do I wake up in the morning without praise on my lips! May I learn to praise Him every morning with elation at God's re-creation of the new day!

When I consider Your heavens, the work of Your fingers, the moon and the stars, which You have ordained, what is man that You are mindful of him, and the son of man that You visit him? For You have made him a little lower than the angels, and You have crowned him with glory and honor. You have made him to have dominion over the works of Your hands; (Psalm 8:3-6, NKJV)

Humanism as Religion: Testable Hypothesis

By Kevin Hadsall

In Part 1 of the Humanism as Religion debate, I stated the case that the religion of humanism should be subject to the same limitations as other religions if it gets to enjoy the same perks. I pointed out the double standard that we currently experience in our culture: the Bible and its teachings, including biblical creation, are typically banned from public schools...yet, humanist beliefs are given a free pass, and the unverifiable evolutionary worldview is the standard teaching of origins.

Besides JD who posted the original comment, five other humanists joined the discussion. In a sense, the entire thread contained multiple debates. For clarity and blog post brevity, I will share this debate in segments that focus on subsets of the complete debate thread. By the time I get to Part 6 of 6, I will have shared the entire debate transcript, but not in exact order.

Part 2 of 6 of the debate below shows the initial discussion between me and humanist BM.

BM: Kevin Hadsall Evolution \neq atheism. Atheism simply states that god or supernatural beings do not exist, or at least there is no verifiable proof either of them or of any interference with the natural world. Evolution is a scientific theory that states that over vast amounts of time, environmental pressure and genetic drift cause changes to the genetic code of a population resulting in speciation. A scientific theory is the result of decades of research and experimentation by hundreds of scientists. All this data, must also be able to be replicated in similar conditions, that means that if a team in Germany comes up with a result, a team in Japan doing the same experiment, should yield a similar result. That is why it is taught in public schools. Not a single part of biblical creation myth is falsifiable. There is NO TESTABLE HYPOTHESIS attached to it. It's just taking a collection of stories passed down from a group of barely literate goat herders in the bronze age and saying, "yes, I think this is definitely what happened".

Me: Yes, technically evolution and atheism are two different things, but they are closely related. Evolution is a foundational belief of atheism, since it offers an explanation for the universe apart from God or any supernatural entity. You mention "verifiable proof"...does evolution have "verifiable proof"? If so, can you provide observable, repeatable, and testable examples of the following? (1) Life evolving from non-life, and (2) "upward" changes in the genotype and phenotype of an organism, such as an originally-blind organism evolving eyesight, or an originally flight-less species developing the ability to fly? Also, your statement is conflating natural selection with evolution, which are two very different things. Natural selection and speciation is the result of genetic loss and recombination, and is ultimately a "downhill" process over time.

Natural selection is observable, but the "uphill" process of evolution is not observable. You can learn more about that here: <https://answersingenesis.org/natural-selection/>.

You say that "verifiable proof" is required for the existence of God. The concept of "proof" implies an immaterial concept: true versus false, or truth versus lie. This immaterial concept makes sense in a biblical worldview with an all-powerful God who set the laws of the universe (Jeremiah 33:25, Hebrews 1:3). This concept also implies that we are capable of studying the universe, which makes sense if we are made in the image of God (Genesis 1:26). However, in a materialistic worldview such as the atheistic, evolutionary worldview, how do you account for immaterial concepts such as "truth"? Moreover, if your brain is the byproduct of unguided chemical reactions over millions of years, then how can you ever trust your own empirical observations to ever be accurate?

Four Geological Evidences for a Young Earth

BY TIM CLAREY, PH.D.

(1st appeared in Acts and Facts, June 2019)

Most people believe rock layers require millions of years to form. This assumption has been taught as fact to geology students and the public for generations. In reality, rocks of any type can and do form quickly under the right conditions.

This article reviews four geological evidences that point to a young world. Collectively, this strong evidence also tips the scale in favor of a 6,000-year-old earth. The scientific data demonstrate that our world's sedimentary rocks cannot be millions of years old.

1. Erosion Is Too Rapid for an Ancient Earth

What would rocks that are millions of years old look like? According to the empirical measurements of today's erosion rates, rocks that are that old shouldn't even exist if they are exposed at the earth's surface.

Modern erosion rates are so fast that according to secular geologists the continents themselves should have been reduced to sea level long ago. A recent study confirmed that outcrops (rocks visible above ground) erode at an average rate of about 40 feet every one million years. This means the time needed to completely erode most continents would be less than 50 million years.

Secular geologists have had to resort to imagined rescuing devices like episodic uplift due to tectonic forces in order to explain the existence of today's continents. However, much of Canada and the eastern United States have not experienced any significant geologic uplift since the creation of the Appalachian Mountains over 250 million years ago, according to the secular timescale. Considering that much of these areas is less than 1,000 feet above sea level, it's a wonder there's any dry land at all in these regions.

Grand Canyon at Toroweap

As secular scientists clearly demonstrated, 1,000 feet of elevation would erode away in just 25 million years. So, if the continents are extremely old, why are they still above sea level? The very existence of Earth's continents, coupled with erosion rates, testifies to the youth of our planet and the truth of God's Word.

2. Shale and Limestone Are Deposited Rapidly by Moving Water

Secular science has long taught that many of Earth's sedimentary rocks were deposited slowly over vast ages. It says the slow rates of deposition for sediments like clay and lime mud are arguments for an old earth, claiming these layers form through sediments slowly settling out of stagnant water. People have been indoctrinated with the notion that enormous periods of time are necessary to explain these thick rock layers.

Yes, we do see clay settling out of stagnant water today, but the rocks we observe didn't form that way. Clay, Earth's most common sediment, doesn't slowly settle out of still water to form rocks. Clay-rich rocks like shale and mudstones often exhibit fine laminations or thin-bedded layers that only form through moving, not stagnant, water. How do we know? Recent empirical evidence demonstrates that laminated clays must be deposited in energetic settings by moving water. Finely laminated clays rarely form today since biological activity (burrowing or bioturbation) usually destroys the thin layers.

The concept of slow-forming limestone strata has been taught as fact for generations. Such carbonate rocks comprise 20 to 25% of the total sedimentary strata on Earth's continents. The Redwall Limestone in Grand Canyon is 400 to 800 feet thick, but some carbonates can exceed 3,000 feet. Uniformitarians have used the presence of these rocks to criticize the Genesis Flood account, pointing out that thick layers of "quiet water" carbonates must have

If I Perish

By Henry M. Morris, PH.D.

“Go, gather together all the Jews that are present in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: and if I perish, I perish.” (Esther 4:16)

This is the courageous testimony of Queen Esther as she prepared to risk her own life in order to save the lives of her people. It was a capital crime for anyone to intrude into the king's throne room unbidden, but she was willing to do so in order to do the will of God, knowing that “we ought to obey God rather than men” (Acts 5:29).

In the same spirit, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego were willing to enter the fiery furnace rather than to worship the humanistic gods of Babylon, testifying to Nebuchadnezzar that “our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods” (Daniel 3:17-18).

God did deliver Esther and the three Jewish youths, but there have been many through the ages who have died for their faith rather than deny their faith. All the apostles (save John) died as martyrs, for example, and so have countless others throughout the centuries. “They loved not their lives unto the death” (Revelation 12:11) if it meant denying their Savior.

Believers in many nations are suffering such persecutions today, and the time is coming when the last great God-rejecting king of the earth (called the “beast” in Scripture) will “cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed” (Revelation 13:15). If a similar choice confronts us, may God give us the grace to say with Paul that “Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death” (Philippians 1:20), and with Esther: “If taken millions of years to form.

But now, all that has changed, and another long-held uniformitarian belief has been exposed as a non-truth. Flume studies verified that carbonate mud is not deposited slowly but instead is laid down rapidly by wave and current action. Laboratory experiments demonstrate that water flowing between 10 and 20 inches per second creates ripples and laminated carbonate mud layers identical to those observed in carbonate rocks. Dr. Juergen Schieber and his co-authors wrote:

These experiments demonstrate unequivocally that carbonate muds can also accumulate in energetic settings....Observations from modern carbonate environments and from the rock record suggest that deposition of carbonate muds by currents could have been common throughout geologic history.

These results match the predictions of creation geologists, who interpret mudstones, shales, and nearly all sedimentary rocks as rapid deposits from the yearlong Flood.

3. There's a Lack of Time Between Layers

When we look at the sedimentary rocks and the various megasequences they form, we most commonly see the layers stacked like pancakes—each one paralleling the layers below and above. There's little indication within the sedimentary strata of the vast amounts of missing time claimed by secular geologists. The boundaries between strata often extend for tens and even hundreds of miles in all directions.

Secular scientists often place hundreds of thousands or millions of years between parallel sedimentary units, such as the boundary between the Hermit Shale in Grand Canyon and the overlying Coconino Sandstone. But when you examine the contact between these particular layers, it's nearly perfectly planar in all directions for tens of miles. There may be small, smooth undulations of a few feet in some locations, but for the most part it's level with sharp contacts from one rock type to the next. Where are the gullies and the uneven topography that should have resulted from erosion over hundreds of thousands of years? The contact looks like brick-upon-brick with no evidence of any time delay whatsoever across the entire expanse of Grand Canyon and beyond.

Many other sedimentary units are also supposed to have vast amounts of time missing between their boundaries in Grand Canyon and elsewhere. Examples include the base of the Redwall Limestone where it rests on the Muav Limestone, supposedly missing 160 million years, and the base of the Tapeats Sandstone where it rests on the crystalline basement in western Grand Canyon, supposedly missing one billion years.

The Redwall Limestone and the Tapeats Sandstone were deposited nearly perfectly flat across Grand Canyon. And recall that the Tapeats and equivalent sandstones extend over much of North America. Nearly everywhere across the expanse of North America, the base of the Tapeats Sandstone layer is a near planar surface. How could so much time for erosion to take place have left such flat surfaces? Instead, the evidence indicates rapid scouring and erosion, creating a planar surface, followed almost immediately by the deposition of new sedimentary layers as tsunami-like waves advanced across the continents.

4. Cold Subducted Slabs Exist Deep in the Mantle

One of the strongest evidences to support catastrophic plate tectonics, runaway subduction, and rapid plate movement during the Flood is the seismic tomography imaging of cold subducted oceanic lithosphere deep in the mantle. Dinosaur Soft Tissue

by Kids Answers of Answers in Genesis

“Then God said, ‘Let the earth bring forth the living creature according to its kind: cattle and creeping thing and beast of the earth, each according to its kind’; and it was so . . . So the evening and the morning were the sixth day.” (Genesis 1:24, 31)

Most TV programs, movies, and books portray dinosaurs as having died out 65 million years ago. We know from the history of the Bible that dinosaurs were made on Day Six of the Creation Week about 6,000 years ago. Dinosaurs could not have gone extinct millions of years ago because Earth isn't that old! Since the Bible is true, we should expect the evidence to support the Bible—and this is exactly what we find. A scientist named Dr. Mary Schweitzer has discovered soft tissue, such as blood vessels, in a T. rex bone! Soft tissue does not last millions of years; it should all have decayed away. But Dr. Schweitzer found it in a dinosaur bone. Scientists' belief in evolution and long ages makes them wonder, “How can soft tissue survive for millions of years?” The question they should be asking is, “Are these dinosaur bones really millions of years old?” The answer is no! Dinosaurs are a recent creation, made by God just 6,000 years ago, and most were buried in the Flood just 4,300 years ago.

On the contrary, the Bible claims that God created plants and animals “according to their kind” as stated numerous times in Genesis 1. Although the initial act of creation is not observable, we can observe that animals continue to reproduce according to their “kind” (approximately equivalent to “Family” in our modern classification system). Dogs produce dogs, cats produce cats, and so forth. However, the evolutionary worldview claims that kinds have evolved into other kinds over millions of years. This has never been observed. Moreover, evolution claims that molecules evolved into Man over the process of millions of years. Nobody has ever observed such a thing, and it's impossible to observe millions of years of supposed biological evolution anyways, because nobody has ever lived that long.

Can humanists like BM demonstrate that molecules-to-man evolution is an observable science? No, and the entire debate thread demonstrates the fact that they are relying on faith without evidence. For the Christian, we have faith as well, but it is not a blind faith.

Our observations of the physical world are perfectly consistent with the Word of the Creator and Redeemer. On the contrary, our observations of the physical world are not consistent with the evolutionary worldview. In Part 3 of 6 of the debate, humanists JD and PK claim that evolution is a “secure fact” and a “fundamental science.” I will share that transcript in my next post.
